ROFRANO WANTED GAIMARI KILLED, WITNESS HEARD

Slayer Tells of Phone Conversation
With Prosecutor Links
With Murder Plot.

Joseph La Salle, a convict-witness whose testimony in the trial of Michael Rofrano for the murder of Michael Gaimari was heard yesterday when he thought he was a spectator in the courtroom make a "death sign" of vengeance against him, had recovered his equanimity to-day and resumed his story without hesitation.

La Salle, who is serving a sentence of from twenty years to life in Sing Sing for the murder of Joe Minetti, a friend of Gaimari, told Assistant District Attorney Brothers to-day that after a good night's sleep in the Tombs he was over his fear, and was sure that Sing Sing's walls would protect him from the man who threatened him.

Justice Weeks ordered no one admitted to the court room to-day unless credentials were shown proving proper business there. There were only twenty-one persons there besides those active in the trial when the examination of La Salle was begun.

La Salle said he fled to the home of Rocco Carnivale on New Utrecht Avenue, Brooklyn, after the murder of Minetti. His brother Tony La Salle had been arrested and was in the Tombs.

"Rocks (Carnivale) told me," said the witness, "that the Big Boss, which was what we called Rofrano, wanted 'The Horse' put out of the way. We called Gaimari 'The Horse.' He told me he had tried to do the job himself once but had failed. Curcio, Frank Pennimore and Montemagno (convicted of killing Gaimari) often came to the house and they talked about 'getting The Horse'."

"Jan. 4 Rocks called the office of the Street Cleaning Department on the telephone and asked if Rofrano was in. He told the operator to say James Moore wanted to talk to Mr. Rofrano."

TOLD "BOSS" HE HAD TO HAVE MONEY.

"After a moment Rocks began talking to a man on the phone. He called him 'Boss.' He said: 'We're trying to arrange things. We've got Tony here—that is what he called Montemagno—and he is ready to take the chance whenever you want it done. He is stiffened up.' Then he listened for a while and said: 'Now, Boss, I've got to have money, got to have it,' and then, 'Well, this is our chance and we had better get to it quick'."

"When he hung up Rocks turned to Montemagno and said: 'Don't worry, kid, there'll be no trouble. We've got the money and the Big Guy says that if we don't get The Horse we won't have any luck hereafter.'"

La Salle said he tried to persuade Carnivale to postpone the assassination lest it harm the chances of Tony La Salle. Carnivale flew into a rage at the suggestion, promising Tony La Salle's interests would be protected.

Carnivale frequently called Rofrano on the telephone at the Municipal Building, at the Home Rule Club and at the home of one Mike Campbell. Once he arranged to send his younger brother to Mike Campbell for money.

"One time at the Home Rule Club I saw Rocks talking to Rofrano for a while," said the witness, "and then he came over to me and Frank Pennimore and said: 'What do you think of that? Mike says all we are doing is looking for the coin; that it's nothing but money, money, money all the time. But I don't blame the guy. It's all my fault. I've been stringing him along for a year and a half and nothing doing. But now I'm cured of using dope I can get on the job. When we get rid of The Horse we can have all the money we want to start a cabaret show and get rich.'"

SAYS CARNIVALE RECEIVED $50 A WEEK.

La Salle said Carnivale for a long time received an allowance of $50 a week, but it was suspended in the early months of 1915.

Martin W. Littleton, Rofrano's counsel, became irritated by Mr. Brothers' exhaustive inquiries regarding under-the-bridge politics, and as his objections were overruled by Justice Weeks, asked rather angrily: "May I inquire whether my client offends the dignity of the court?"

"Not at all," replied Justice Weeks. A little later Mr. Brothers took exception to a question by Mr. Littleton saying it was unfair because it was "obscene." Mr. Littleton appealed to Justice Weeks.

agreed with Mr. Brothers, saying the court's intelligence was higher than that of the witness and the court did not understand the question.

The court is not informed of the purpose of the question," said Mr. Littleton, "and the witness is." Then he added with great deliberation and a voice shaking with anger: "I wish to thank the court for his criticisms of my conduct of this case and to assure the court that there will be many more opportunities for such criticism before the trial is over."

"Proceed," said Justice Weeks, calmly.

La Salle told Mr. Littleton his first full confession to the District Attorney was made two weeks after his conviction. He had written, offering to make a statement to Mr. Brothers. "What did Mr. Brothers say when you were brought to his office?" asked Mr. Littleton.

"He said: 'What rings you down here?' and I answered: 'Oh, I wanted a little fresh air.'"

La Salle admitted committing perjury on his trial and at other times.

RECALLS ROFRANO'S SPEECH AT A BANQUET.

Mr. Brothers asked about a banquet of the Italian American Democratic Club at which Rofrano made a speech saying that Gaimari was a powerful antagonist and must be got out of the way.

La Salle said that as he remembered it Rofrano said Gaimari "must be beaten." Mr. Littleton objected in vain.

La Salle said Rofrano and Carnivale had talked over a plan to have the murder of Vincenzo Cirillo. They were arrested and Rofrano claimed the credit for having them acquitted but denounced them as ingrates when they refused to repay him by joining his revolt against Big Tom Foley.

Rofrano declared, said the witness, he would "get even."

At recess Mr. Littleton angrily declared, regarding the speech at the banquet, that the prosecution was being permitted to make out a respectable gathering, at which Justice Freschi of Special Sessions was present, was "a murder banquet," and that Rofrano's speech was innocent of any except a political meaning.

JAILED AS CAR WRECKER.

Brown Man Arrested After Chase by Police With Pistols.

After a long chase through Bronx streets to-day, policemen firing revolvers in the air to attract reinforcements, Eugene Shaughnessy of No. 426 East One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Street, a Union Railway starter, and Detective Buddemeyer caught Henry Johnson, a striking motorman.

Shaughnessy said a group of strikers, of whom Johnson was one, had bombarded a car with stones at Buchanan Place and Grand Avenue, breaking eight windows. Shaughnessy, who was in the car, was slightly cut. Magistrate Brough held Johnson in $500 bail in Morrisania Court.

GOOD DIGESTION MEANS GOOD HEALTH

"Yes, I'm feeling FINE! Full of energy, nerves steady as a rock, and I've got an appetite like a bear! Never have to worry about what I eat, either, because there's no comeback from my stomach. That's because I treat it right—just give it the little gastro-pepsin tablets after meals. They make my food DIGEST. I always feel sorry for the fellows I see doubled up with indigestion, for I used to suffer that way myself before I started taking gastro-pepsin tablets. Yes, they will do just as much for you, too. They are a wonderful tonic for weak stomachs. You can get them at most every drugstore, or you can send direct to the Malto-Ferrin Chemical Co., 81 Prospect Place, Brooklyn, enclosing 25 or 50 cents for the size box you want.—Advt.
